One of the features of Windows 10 is Cortana, the voice-controlled helper that by default listens to its user queries in the form of voice commands or whenever its user brings the device to her/his ear and the microphone is toward her/him. From the old days, Windows 7 and 8 users were accustomed to the action of setting focus on the focused application whenever a voice query was made. In Windows 10, Cortana can read such queries/requests and assign relevant actions in this regard. Setting Voice Commands With Cortana By default, this feature is turned off in Windows 10. However, it is worth customizing this feature in Windows 10 to turn it on. One can do this by giving a voice command, "tell Cortana to say something." This is a very easy process and will guide you through it step-by-step. Step 2: If
